

Call for papers – Gender and Justice

Gender and Justice is a new, international and transdisciplinary journal dedicated to advancing critical feminist scholarship on justice in the social sciences, and from different methodological perspectives.

The journal aims to showcase innovative contributions that are theoretically-driven and/or empirically-grounded that address various forms of gender inequality, injustice and exclusion which influence and shape individuals' lives across diverse and global contexts. The Editors' conception of justice is comprehensive. It encompasses economic, social, criminal, distributive, environmental, cultural and political dimensions.

Our scope is broad and includes, but is not limited to, the following disciplines:

- Sociology
- Criminology
- Socio-legal studies
- Gender studies
- Queer studies
- Economics
- Human geography
- Ethnography
- Anthropology

Read about our aims and scope to learn more: <https://bristoluniversitypress.co.uk/journals/gender-and-justice/about>

We are seeking contributions of the following article types:

- Research Articles: The Editors invite authors to submit articles that are based on original research. Gender and Justice is particularly interested in articles that offer innovative feminist contributions that are theoretically-driven and/or empirically-grounded that address various forms of inequality, injustice and exclusion that influence and shape individuals' lives across diverse and global contexts.
- Feminist interventions–Review Essays: The Editors invite authors to submit contributions in the form of Feminist Interventions–Review Essays on issues that are timely in feminist research. Contributions should adopt a symposium style, and involve input from no more than four contributors on a particular subject area that is of interest to researchers focused on gender and justice, as well as forms of inequality, exclusions and marginalisation.
- Creative Feminist Methodologies: The Editors invite authors to submit research articles that use creative methods and methodologies to advance feminist scholarship epistemologically and ontologically. Specifically, we welcome contributions from authors that use the following creative research method and methodologies: Arts-based methods, Research using technology, Mixed-methods research and Transformative research.
- In Conversation With: The Editors invite expressions of interest in an occasional series, comprising conversations with leaders and people doing innovative work in the field of gender and justice understood broadly. These pieces should be dialogical in style.

- Book Reviews: We encourage the author to provide a succinct description of the book's key features and to think about the questions raised by the text and the problems and issues that might be explored through a critical reading of its content.

See our author instructions for more information:

<https://bristoluniversitypress.co.uk/journals/gender-and-justice/about>

If you would like to discuss a submission or propose a special issue please contact the Editors at genderandjustice-editorial@bristol.ac.uk.

The first issue of Gender and Justice will publish in early 2025. Follow us on X @GendrJustJrnl or sign up to our mailing list to stay up to date with the journal's development: Bristol University Press | Signup for our newsletters.